Curriculum Overview

Strong Dads, Super Kids

Curriculum Format

This Strong Dads curriculum is designed to be used as a single-session curriculum with fathers and their young children. The length of the single session is one hour.

The curriculum may be used as a multi-session curriculum with up to four sessions. The only guidance provided in this curriculum for multi-session usage is the following:

- 1) Review one skill per session.
- 2) Review the complete content of the handbook for the skill for each session.
- 3) Review, model and practice more activities for each skill.
- 4) Consider combining the session with other activities such as a play day, a read in, lunch with their child, mothers night out, etc.

Strong Dads Overview

The Strong Dads Program promotes early and on-going engagement by fathers and father figures, through playing, reading, talking and caring for their children ages birth through five. The Strong Dads program encourages, equips and engages fathers and father figures as the other parent to help in their children's lifelong success. The Strong Dads program provides a common fathering program framework across any early childhood education program to enhance but not replace existing fathering efforts.

The characteristics of the Strong Dads Program are:

- 1) Written to utilize approaches that encourage father involvement
- 2) Provides the tools and resources to remove barriers and foster confidence and success
- 3) Encourages more frequent and consistent father engagement
- 4) Fosters the understanding that father engagement is sustained by the father-child relationship

The presentation of the curriculum focuses on four skills (play, read, talk and care) and divided into four sections that are based on an adaptation of the adult learning model^{1,2}:

- 1) Engage the dads and explore their own experience with the skill
- 2) Explain/Teach dads the importance of each skill
- 3) Model the skills for the dads and
- 4) Practice the skills with his child

Engage/Explore

The purpose of this section is to engage the dads and explore their own experience. We want to move dads from disengaged to engaged, take the dads from spectator to participant, and invite them as individuals to join the group. We want to address their diverse adult learning styles through a simple activity or video as a way to capture their attention and introduce practical skills.

Explore a question to find out what the participants already know and invite them to share. Create a dialogue rather than a monologue. Share thoughtful open-ended questions about the skill to stir a strong response as they connect it to past positive and/or negative memories that bring the topic alive for them.

Explain/Teach

The purpose of this section is to explain to dads in a clear and concise manner the benefits of investing in their children's development using these skills. These few easy-to-remember researched-based reasons will help motivate dads to practice the skills. This section is written in an easy to read format using some memory reinforcing exercises.

Model

The purpose of this section is to take the dads through the curriculum while modeling the skill. Going through the curriculum and modeling the skill will be helpful for the auditory and visual learning and will build confidence that the dads can be successful using the skills.

Invite a father to volunteer to model the skill with your help and input from the other fathers. Use your skills to keep the experience a positive reinforcing experience for the volunteers and other fathers.

Practice

The purpose of this section is to give the fathers/father-figures the allotted time to go through the curriculum. The fathers are encouraged not to race through the time but to relax and enjoy the time together free of stress.

Background of Strong Dads

The Strong Dads program shares the Head Start viewpoint that mothers and fathers are their children's primary teachers. The Strong Dads program encourages fathers to improve their children's school readiness across what Heads Start identifies as four essential domains: language and literacy, cognitive, physical, and social-emotional development. This is accomplished through promoting the engagement of fathers through playing, reading, talking and caring for their children.

The Strong Dads program focuses on fathers because fathers are critical to the wellbeing of their children. Research shows that father love is just as important as mother love for a child's happiness, well-being, social and academic success, emotional stability and self-esteem.³ Conversely, children growing up in father-absent homes are more likely to fare poorly across a wide range of outcomes including financial, educational, behavioral, legal and sexual.⁴

The Strong Dads program leverages the parents' desire for a better life for their children through educational attainment. Analyzed data from the Census Bureau shows that if young people finish high school, get a job and get married before they have children, they have only a 2 percent chance of falling into poverty and nearly a 75 percent chance of joining the middle class by earning $50,000 or more per year.⁵ According to the Census Bureau, on average, a high school diploma can result in lifetime earnings of more than one million dollars, and that doubles with the completion of a bachelor's degree.⁶

The Strong Dads program promotes effective co-parenting that leads to positive outcomes for children. Co-parenting refers to how parents work together in their roles as caregivers, even if they are not still romantically involved. Effective co-parenting requires cooperation, supportiveness and mutual involvement. Research shows that positive co-parenting relationships have a direct link to quality parenting that is necessary for a child's optimal brain development and behavioral and emotional adjustment.⁷

The Center for the Study of Social Policy developed a prevention strategy addressing child abuse and neglect. This strengthening families approach of the Strong Dads program, based on the research literature, recommends five protective factors to ensure the wellbeing of children and families. These include:⁸

1. increasing parental resilience
2. building the social connections of parents
3. increasing knowledge of parenting and child development
4. providing concrete supports in times of need and
5. supporting the parental nurturing bond with children

Research Basis for Strong Dads

Through the Strong Dads program the Kansas Department for Children and Families (DCF) seeks to improve child well-being by increasing healthy father engagement. Getting fathers involved very early with their children increases the likelihood of continued involvement.⁹ Examples of this are the studies showing that children who attend Head Start and Early Head Start, which promote early parental engagement, do better in their development than children who do not attend.¹⁰

The Strong Dads program promotes father engagement through the four skills of PLAY, READ, TALK and CARE. The research suggests that father-child PLAY contributes to a child's emotional and social development.¹¹ Fathers and mothers play differently and a child benefits by both types of play.¹² A father's play is more free-spirited, physical and exciting.¹³

One study shows that fathers who READ with very young children are more likely to continue to be involved and develop in their own confidence to help their children read.¹⁴ Encouraging fathers to read to their children can help empower dads to take a more active role in preparing their children to read.¹⁵ Daily parent-child reading from infancy helps develop on going cognitive skills and vocabulary growth.¹⁶

Studies reveal that the CARE of a father, including his attitude and sensitivity to his child, has a positive influence on the child's social and emotional development.¹⁷ A father's care is associated with sons who are more empathetic towards other children.¹⁸

Fathers who regularly TALK to their children help their children's language development. Highly-involved fathers of preschool-age children are shown to have higher verbal skills.¹⁹ Research suggests that supportive engaged fathers benefit their children's language and cognitive development.²⁰

The Strong Dads program encourages and equips fathers and father figures to encourage their child's physical, social, emotional and mental development. Playing, reading, talking and caring today supports child well-being now and in later school success.

Kit - Play, Read, Talk and Care

Items Needed:

- 1 The Strong Dads kit
- 2 Strong Dads Handbook

This is an introductory session to the kit and the four skills.

Lesson-at-a-glanceKit Play, Read, Talk & Care

Kit Principle: Dads develop their children.

Practice: To help my child develop, I will Play, Read, Talk and Care.

Kit | 1 introduction

4 | 4

PURPOSE: Introduce the program, passout the kits, share the lesson principal and practice and review the pledge.

PREPARE: Check to make sure you have the right number of Kits for the dads who registered and are attending the event.

OUTLINE: A sample of the class outline is:

- 1) Welcome and description of program
- 2) Program survey (a short evaluation determined by evaluator)
- 3) Kit instruction and distribution
- 4) Repeat 5-7 for play, read, talk and care
- 5) Review skill
- 6) Model skill
- 7) Practice skills
- 8) Summary

SETUP: An effective setup is fathers seated in a semi-circle on a carpeted floor with birth to 2 age children or seated side-by-side for 4 to 5 year old children. This is done to help the fathers engage with their children and other fathers.

STATE: Who are you? In your child's little eyes you are bigger than life, a superman, a Strong Dad! And with those same eyes, they are looking to you to help him or her develop.

STATE: This Strong Dads program is about helping your child develop. The Strong Dads program encourages you to engage in more playing, reading, talking and caring today to help your child develop now to get ready for kindergarten later.

[action: INTRODUCE THE STRONG DADS KIT]

NOTE: Excitement is contagious but don't overdo it.

share

STATE: The Strong Dads Kit (valued at $50) contains items that were included to assist you in more playing, reading, talking and caring for your child.

STATE: The session format in presenting the skills and the items in the kit:

- 1) The item in the kit for the skill will be modeled for you.
- 2) You will be given time to practice the skill using the item with your child.
- 3) You will be challenged to use the item to practice the skill more in order to help your child develop.

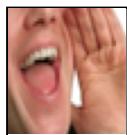

STATE: Strong Dads, help their child develop!

NOTE: Be sure to give clear instructions on using the kit to make sure they do not become a distraction. The father needs to make sure the bag stays closed until needed.

share

STATE: Fathers are experts when it comes to their children. The Strong Dads program is about using your expertise to help your child develop through playing, reading, talking and caring.

[action: PASS OUT THE STRONG DADS KIT]

share

STATE: To minimize distractions for you and your child, please follow my instructions on using the Kit.

STATE: Please open your bag to get out the handbook and then close the bag. The handbook provides some simple but important guidance on playing, reading, talking and caring.

Kit | 2 principle, practice & pledge

NOTE: Have the group recite the pledge together from the book. Emphasis to them the first two sentences from the pledge which is the focus of the kit introduction.

share

STATE: The first principle I want to share is, “Dads develop their children.” and the practice is, “I will play, read, talk and care more to help my child grow.”

STATE: Please turn to page 12 and let us recite together the Strong Dads Pledge.

Strong Dads Pledge

I am a strong Dad,
who plans to be there.
To help my child develop,
I will Play, Read, Talk and Care.
I'll PLAY more with my child,

to help her (him) socially grow.
I'll READ more to my child,
school success to show.
I'll TALK more to my child,
each other and words to know.
I'll CARE more for my child,
to help her (him) emotionally thrive.
Strong Dads, super kids,

NOTE: Make sure you are prepared to demonstrate this activity and make the main point. If your session time is running late then make this an activity you demonstrate rather than have the fathers participate.

PURPOSE: This quick activity introduces fathers to the topic of play and makes a simple fun point.

PREPARE: In preparation for this class, make sure each father has a sheet of paper and secure a trash can that will be a challenge for the men to make a basket either by the size of the trash can or the distance away from the men.

NOTE: When giving the instructions for this activity, share your excitement for the learning activity. One of the laws of learning is that learning begins when you start having fun.

[action: Give everyone a SHEET OF PAPER.]

NOTE: Demonstrate the activity for the men.

INSTRUCT: Play can be simple and fun.

S1 | 2 explore & explain Play

prepare

PURPOSE: These questions introduce fathers to the topic of play.PREPARE: Make sure you have practiced demonstrating the play.

NOTE: This is a reminder that their learning begins when they are having fun, so share your contagious excitement.

NOTE: As the men and fathers answer the questions, it is important for you to listen and reinforce what is right. Also if you don't understand their answer, others also may not, so ask further questions for clarity.

NOTE: Be sure to encourage whatever they share. This can be done by simply repeating what they say, thanking them for sharing or remarking "good comment."

[action: Discuss PLAY.]

ASK: Why do we play?

ASK: What was play like when you were a child? (For example: who were your playmates, what games did you play, what were your favorite toys?)

ASK: Why is play important to your child?

NOTE: An optional way of introducing the skill playing is showing one of the three Strong Dads PSA videos on playing.

OPTIONALLY STATE: Here is a Strong Dads PSA video to introduce the importance of playing and tips on playing.

OPTIONALLY ASK: What stood out to you about as you watched this video?

Point3: Play is FUN.

share

STATE: The demands of life can bring stress to work, home and school.

STATE: Play can be a valued time for Dads and children to be relieved of stress and just relax and enjoy time together.

STATE: Laughing and having fun during a quality time of playing is important to everyone's well-being.

STATE: Playing with your child for just five minutes MORE daily can make a lifetime impact for you and your child.

INSTRUCT: With the help of the other fathers I will walk you through step-by-step what to do.

ASK: Is there a father who would volunteer with your child to help us model the activity with my help and input from the other fathers?

NOTE: If a father volunteers then state the following, otherwise you are to model the skill. To model the skill, use the bear from the kit as your child.

NOTE: Make sure you remember their names, so you will be able to refer to them by name. If you do not get it the first time it's okay to ask them to share their name again.

share

STATE: Thank you for helping us today. Please share your name and child's name and age.

STATE: We will begin by reviewing some things to remember when playing with our children.

INSTRUCT: Please turn to page 13 of your Handbook.

The MORE Fun Principles of Practicing of Skills

- 1) Make it up: Be creative with skills by doing it your way.
- 2) Often: Use skills consistently and frequently.
- 3) Repeat: Doing the same thing over and over again is good.
- 4) Engage: Engage in touch and face to face interaction.
- 5) Fun: Make it enjoyable and stress free.

S2 | 1 engage Read drawing

NOTE: Make sure you are prepared to share your drawing. If your session time is running late then make this an activity you demonstrate rather than have the fathers participate.

PURPOSE: This quick activity introduces fathers to the topic of reading and makes a simple point of the importance of books.

PREPARE: In preparation for this class, make sure each father has a sheet of paper and a pencil. You will ask the men to draw a picture of their favorite childhood character. The character can come from the words of a book, nursery rhyme or song.

NOTE: When giving the instructions for this activity, share your excitement for the learning activity. One of the laws of learning is that learning begins when you start having fun.

[action: Give everyone a SINGLE SHEET OF PAPER and a PENCIL]

share

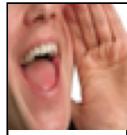

INSTRUCT: We are going to have a little fun by taking a journey back to your earliest childhood memories.

INSTRUCT: From your earliest childhood memory, draw a picture of a favorite character that you remember from the words of a book, song or nursery rhyme.

NOTE: Give the men about 30 seconds to finish drawing. If they seem stuck, either provide examples from your memories or ask the fathers to give examples aloud.

[action: Go around the room and ask fathers to share their characters.]

NOTE: Be sure to encourage whatever they share. This can be done by simply repeating what they say.

share

SUMMARIZE: Reading is influential. Many of the characters you have drawn and fondly remember over many years, live or exist through the power of reading words.

TRANSITION: We did a simple exercise to engage you in the topic of reading and provide a way for you to connect to your own experience with reading. Next, we will look at why reading is so important to your child.

S2 | 2 explore & explain READ

4 | 27

[action: Discuss READING.]ASK: Why is reading important?*ASK: What are some reasons or barriers why dads don't read more with their children?

NOTE: Remember to affirm the answers the fathers give. The next activity is a quick summary of some reasons fathers don't read.

STATE: Let's look at a quick summary of some reasons dads don't read more with their children.INSTRUCT: Please turn to page 25 of your handbook.[action: Review barriers to reading on PAGE 25.]

The Barriers to Reading

(Use the following words to fill in the blank: time, expensive, teach, good, like)

1. I do not like to read!
2. I am not good at reading.
3. I do not have time to read.
4. School and children's television can teach my child to read.

5. Books are too expensive.

share

STATE: There is a way around each of these barriers.
Next, we will explore some reasons why we should read more with our children.

NOTE: An optional way of introducing the skill reading is showing one of the three Strong Dads PSA videos on reading.

OPTIONALLY STATE: Here is a Strong Dads PSA video to introduce the importance of reading and share tips.

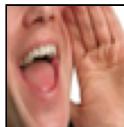

OPTIONALLY ASK: What stood out to you about reading as you watched this video?

[optional action: Show the BUBBA READ video]

[action: Review reasons to READ on PAGE 26.]

share

STATE: Here are three reasons Strong Dads read to their children.

INSTRUCT: Please open to page 26 in your handbook.

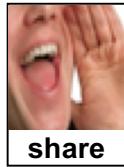

POINT 1: The first reason Strong Dads read with their children is that reading strengthens the BOND between you and your child.²⁴

page 26

Point1: Reading strengthens your BOND with your child.

share

STATE: Research shows that when a father reads to his young child, his closeness and calmness develops his child's confidence, which is a building block to learning.²⁵

STATE: Helping to build your child's confidence enables him/her to have the courage to try to learn new things and believe in themselves both now and in the years to come.

POINT2: The second reason Strong Dads READ to their children is that reading helps your child to DEVELOP six cognitive skills important for learning.²⁶

page 26

Point2: Reading DEVELOPS six (6) cognitive skills important for learning.

share

STATE: Research shows that when a father reads to his children on a regular basis it increases his children's ability to:

- 1) think
- 2) reason
- 3) understand
- 4) imagine
- 5) learn words and

²⁵ Ibid

6) increase their verbal skills²⁷

All of these skills are vital to every area of your child's growth and development.

POINT 3: The third reason Strong Dads READ to their children is that reading PREPARES your children for school success.

page 26

Point3: Reading PREPARES your child for school success.

share

STATE: Research shows that when fathers read every day to their children beginning at birth, they are helping them become reading ready when they start school.

STATE: The more successful your child is at school, the more it will increase your child's enjoyment of school, love of learning and increase his/her understanding of the importance of education to his/her future success in life.

STATE: This is a reminder, that the Strong Dads handbook contains activities with suggested age guidelines that may need to be customize for your children.

[action: Introduce the ALPHABET BOOK.]

NOTE: Get the alphabet book and introduce the books to the fathers.

DESCRIBE: The books were selected to promote READING because of their quality and durability in binding. The basic topics these books cover are the alphabet, numbers, colors, animals, dads and a growing child.

NOTE: Invite a Father with his child to volunteer to model the activity with your help and input from the other fathers. Be prepared to model the activity in case a father does not volunteer.

INSTRUCT: I am looking for father-child volunteer who will help us model the activity. We will tell you everything you need to do.

ASK: Is there a father who would volunteer with their child to help us model the activity with my help and input from the other fathers?

NOTE: If a father volunteers then state the following, otherwise you are to model the skill. To model the skill, use the bear from the kit as your child.

STATE: Thank you for helping us today. Share your name and your child's name and age.

NOTE: Make sure you remember their names, so you will be able to refer to them by name. If you do not get it the first time it's okay to ask them to share their name again.

NOTE: Introduce the activity, the benefits of the activity and then step by step go through the activity while leading the volunteer in showing the rest of the group.

NOTE: Keep the experience positive and reinforcing for the volunteers and the other fathers.

[action: Review and model activity on PAGE 27.]

S3 | 1 engage Talk

PURPOSE: This activity introduces fathers to the topic of talking with an example of the importance of communication.

PREPARE: In preparation for this class, you will need a volunteer to participate with you.

NOTE: When giving the instructions for this activity, share your excitement for the learning activity. One of the laws of learning is that learning begins when you start having fun.

[action: Ball up a piece of paper.]

NOTE: This engagement activity is a demonstration of communication.²⁸ You will need a volunteer father who can participate.

[action: Recruit a volunteer.]

STATE: I want to share a demonstration of the importance of communication as a two way exchange of talking and listening between you and your child.

INSTRUCT (to the volunteer): This balled up piece of paper represents the thoughts and feelings of your child. If you want your relationship to grow closer with your child you have to exchange these thoughts and feelings between each other.

STATE (to the volunteer): For our demonstration, you represent your child and I represent you, the father.

INSTRUCT (to the volunteer): As the child, you are going to throw your balled up piece of paper, which represents your thoughts and feelings, to me so I can catch it.

[action: Exchange the paper ball with the volunteer.]

INSTRUCT: Then we all will discuss my response as the father to the child's attempts to communicate his or her thoughts and feelings.

STATE (to the volunteer): Please don't take my response personally.

²⁸ Williams, G.R. (2010). 365Dad. The Paper Communication Exercise.

[action: Ask for a first throw. Do nothing to try to catch it. Let it fall to the ground.]

NOTE: Give the fathers a chance to answer the questions but if they struggle for answers or hesitate to answer, try to help bring out their answers by giving some guidance.

NOTE: Be sure to encourage whatever they share. This can be done by simply repeating what they say.

share

ASK: What just happened? (The father ignored the child's communication).

ASK: How could this be helpful or a problem? (This is hurtful emotionally and discourages future communication; we should be mindful not to ignore our child).

[action: Ask for a second throw. Do not catch but hit the paper hard away. Be careful not to hit anyone.]

ASK: What just happened? (The father rejected the child's communication).

ASK: How could this be helpful or a problem? (This is also hurtful emotionally and discourages future communication; we must not reject our child's communication.)

[action: Ask for a third throw. Try to catch but don't catch.]

share

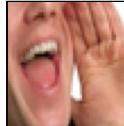

ASK: What just happened? (The father tries to receive the child's communication).

ASK: How could this be helpful or a problem? (This demonstrates the father's desire to communicate and encourages future communication. The more you try, the better you communicate).

[action: Ask for a fourth throw. Catch the paper.]

share

ASK: What just happened? (The father receives the child's communication).

ASK: How could this be helpful or a problem? (This affirms the child's thoughts and feelings and reinforces future communication. Communication can strengthen your relationship with your child).

SUMMARIZE: Communication is a two way exchange of talking and listening and the more it is done, the more your child's language skills develop and the stronger your relationship grows.

ASK: In what ways do men and women communicate differently? (e.g. women use more words, men use body language, women talk down to children, men use their adult language)

ASK: Why do you think men are less verbal?

ASK: How can a man's past history of communication impact the way he communicates today?

STATE: Let's explore some experiences in our "Talk History" that could impact our communication today.

INSTRUCT: Please turn to page 33 in your Strong Dads Handbook.

[action: Review the talk history on PAGE 33.]

NOTE: The next part is a quick review. Give the answer and read the sentence from the handbook. Be sure to encourage the dads who answer.

OUR Talk History

(Use the following words to fill in the blank: silent, father, willing, ignored, hurt)

1. Did I grow up in a home where my father was not available to talk?
2. Can I remember a time when people ignored what I had to say?
3. Did the people around me often use words that hurt rather than build?
4. Would I rather be silent than talk?
5. Am I willing to talk more with my child?

SUMMARIZE: Our history with communication can impact whether it is difficult or easy for us to talk. Next we will examine why we need to work on talking more to our child regardless of our talk history.

Point2: Talking can improve your child's cognitive skills.

STATE: Numerous studies demonstrate that language exposure in very early life has a significant effect on later verbal skills.³²

STATE: High quality sensitive and supportive father involvement from the month following birth is connected with a range of positive outcomes in babies and toddlers.³³

STATE: Positive outcome include scoring higher on IQ tests at 12 months and 3 years.³⁴

POINT3: The third reason Strong Dads talk to their children is that talking to their children improves their children's understanding and broadens their vocabulary.³⁵

L4 | 1 engage Care

PURPOSE: This activity introduces fathers to the topic of caring with a simple paper folding exercise that relates to fatherhood.

PREPARE: In preparation for this class make sure you know how to make the paper hat. You can follow the video instructions for making the paper hat at https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-_uZrfFy6lw.

NOTE: When giving the instructions for this activity, share your excitement for the learning activity. One of the laws of learning is that learning begins when you start having fun.

[action: Give everyone a single sheet of PAPER.]

[action: Recruit a volunteer.]

share

STATE: I am going to ask a question I don't want you to answer but just think about it while we do an activity. The question is: What is fatherhood?

INSTRUCT: We are going to take a blank sheet of paper and we are going to shape an object out of it.

[action: Hold up the paper - portrait (not landscape).]

INSTRUCT: Hold the paper the long way up and down and fold the paper in half.

[action: Fold the paper in half and hold up to show men.]

INSTRUCT: With the fold at the top, fold the top corners in to the center.

[action: Make the folds and hold up to show men.]

INSTRUCT: Fold up the bottom edges.

[action: Make the folds and show men.]

share

ASK: And what do we have? The answer is a hat. What does a hat have to do with fatherhood?

STATE: One way to connect this hat to fatherhood is the word "hood," which represents a covering.

share

Like a hat covers our head, fatherhood covers our children.
Fatherhood protects, provides and gives care for children.

ASK: In what ways do fathers cover, provide or care for their children?

ASK: Why is caring so important to your child?

NOTE: Be sure to encourage whatever they share. This can be done by simply repeating what they say.

explore

SUMMARIZE: You have already provided some good insight on caring for children. Next, we will look a little deeper at why a father's care is so important to their children.

S4 | 2 explore & explain CARE

ASK: In what ways does a father's relationship with the mother affect his relationship with his child?

ASK: What can a dad do to improve his relationship with his child's mother? (e.g. help care for her and the child, tips on relating to her in the handbook)

share

STATE: Modeling care for your child begins with modeling care for the other caregiver of your child, the mother.

STATE: It is often stated, "The best thing you can do for a child is love their mother."

STATE: Not all parents who have a child together are still “together.”

STATE: However, all parents can work together for the benefit of their child even if they are not “together.”

STATE: Let's look briefly at some tips on how you can relate better to the mother of your child whether or not you are together.

INSTRUCT: Please turn to page 46 of your Handbook.

[action: Review relating to the other caregiver on PAGE 46.]

NOTE: The next part is a quick review. Give the answer and read the sentence from the handbook. Be sure to encourage the dads who answer.

RELATE to the Other Caregiver

(Use the following words to fill in the blank: effort, time, affirm, listen, emotion, reassure)

1. Do I REASSURE her often of my love or respect?
2. Can I let her experience her EMOTIONS without getting drawn in?
3. Do I LISTEN to her as a filter not a fixer?
4. Do I AFFIRM her often of her beauty or talents?
5. Do I invest TIME in the relationship?
6. Do I make an EFFORT to help with the work?

share

ASK: What does a dad's care for his child look like? (e.g. more than just supplying money)

NOTE: An optional way of introducing the skill caring is showing one of the three Strong Dads PSA videos on caring.

OPTIONALLY STATE: Here is a Strong Dads PSA video to introduce the importance of caring and tips on it.

OPTIONALLY ASK: What stood out to you about caring as you watched this video?

[optional action: Show the BUBBA CARE video]

[action: Review reasons to CARE.]

share

STATE: Next, we are going to look at three reasons Strong Dads care for their children.

POINT 1: The first reason Strong Dads care for their children is that a father's care strengthens his children's ability to THRIVE in life, school and relationships.³⁸

page 45

Point1: A child THRIVES with their father's care.

Cox, J.J. (1992). Prediction of Infant-Father and Infant-Mother Attachment. Developmental Psychology, 28, 474-483

share

STATE: Several studies have found that when fathers spend more time on child care tasks, children benefit.

STATE: For instance, in one study, preschool-age children whose fathers were responsible for 40 percent or more of the family child care tasks, had higher scores on assessments of cognitive development, had greater understanding of the world around them and exhibited more empathy than those children whose fathers were less involved.³⁹

STATE: Empathy is being able to understand the feelings of others.

STATE: Furthermore, a study on parent-infant attachment found that fathers who were affectionate, spent time with their children, and overall had a positive attitude were more likely to have securely attached infants.⁴⁰

POINT2: The second reason Strong Dads care for their children is that caring helps to strengthen your children's SELF-CONFIDENCE in school, extra-curricular activities and relationships outside the home.⁴¹

STATE: Research from a U.S. Department of Education study indicates that the role of fathers in school and child care helps with the achievement of children.⁴²

STATE: Research shows that the children from two-parent homes where fathers participated in activities (such as school meetings, parent-teacher conferences, school or child care activities or events, or volunteerism) were more likely to receive higher grades, participate in extracurricular activities, and be happier in a child care or school setting.⁴³

POINT3: The third reason Strong Dads care for their children is that caring improves your child's ability to SOLVE PROBLEMS.⁴⁴
